October 2, 1950 (The first ever Peanuts comic strip. Charlie Brown, Patty and Shermy appear. Patty would not be named until the end of the month and Shermy would not be named until December 18, 1950. The gag in this strip is recycled from the Li'l Folks strip from May 29, 1949. This strip is adapted in Happiness Is a Warm Blanket, Charlie Brown)
Enjoyable to see these old Charlie Brown books and like many popular characters amaze how diffident in their first appearance 1950, how they change to what is Charlie Brown we know from 1960s and 1970s the humor holds up amazing well

Other books like this book set classic peanuts come with set of wonderful postcards with cover each book been years since seen theses my dad got some in 1967 when mum and dad went to Canada for short while always loved books and read them in newspaper read comic strips, use to have Charlie brown Christmas record when I was 6 years old.

On October 2, 1950, the first Peanuts strip ran in seven newspapers. A simple little strip that barely resembles Charlie Brown and the ragtag cast of young characters we all know and love, the strip nonetheless became a success. He won his first Reuben Award, one of the highest honors for a cartoonist, in 1955 wonderful series that bring new generation kids to world of star trek like they did with when I saw star trek the animated series in 1973 was my first taste of star trek am not fan of computer animation but this was really good and catch me in this adventure of each episode to find what happens next.

Nice change to make aliens full crew and lean about each other work together and trust and solve the mystery of the ship and fight for your dreams to make them come true support each other be who you want be not by others expect to do. Like way never talk down to young audience to tell good min ark storyline or not over do the star trek science

The Mystery of St. Valentine

No one is certain which of the notable Valentines in history inspired the name of this holiday. However, in 270 CE, emperor Claudius II Gothicus put to death a priest with this name. Shortly before his execution, legend has it that the priest sent a letter to a young lady. Perhaps his way of closing the letter, “from your Valentine,” sparked the tradition of sending Valentines to loved ones. Other people say that the Valentine behind the holiday was a bishop from Terni, Italy who secretly performed marriages forbidden by the emperor. A third theory is that the executed priest and the marriage-performing bishop were the same romantic person.

Why February 14th?

Every year on February 15, priests called Luperci sacrificed animals. Afterward, they cut narrow strips of skin from the sacrificed animals and ran around using them to hit women they encountered in the streets. Supposedly, any woman touched by the animal skin became fertile. These rituals happened during an ancient Roman festival called Lupercalia. At the end of the 5th century, Pope Gelasius declared February 14 St. Valentine's Day, and since then, February 14th has been a day of celebration—though it was generally more religious than romantic Valentine's Day

Exchanging Cards

In the 16th century, people started to send messages called valentines. By the late 18th century, printers began selling commercially-produced Valentine's Day cards. Now, about a billion valentines are exchanged every year in the United States. Behind Christmas, it's the most popular day of the year to send cards!

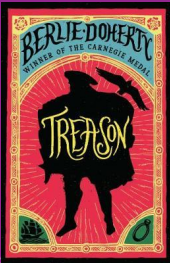

Cupid

In Roman mythology, Cupid is the son of the goddess of love, Venus. His mother often took advantage of his job as a messenger to the gods to send him on mischievous missions to arouse love in victims shot by passion-inspiring arrows. He is often pictured as an infant with wings, a bow, and a quiver of magical arrows.

Archaeologists May Have Discovered the Oldest And Most Complete Egyptian Mummy
The Good News Network

----- BY ANDY CORBLEY

Near the Step Pyramid of Djoser, Egyptologists working on an ancient cemetery uncovered what has been called “the oldest and most complete mummy found in Egypt to date.” Located at the bottom of a 45-foot (15-meter) shaft, a limestone sarcophagus contained the remains of a very rich man whom hieroglyphics named Heka-shepas, who was probably the oldest mummy ever found who wasn’t a blue blood.

How old was this Heka-shepas? Last year was the 100th anniversary of the opening of the “Boy King” Tutenkhamon’s tomb. During the Boy King’s reign, Heka-shepas had already been slumbering under the sands for more than 1,000 years. The shaft containing him was found near the modern-day village of Saqqara, a location near the capital city of Egypt during the Old Kingdom, from 2,700 to 2,200 BCE. His remains were found covered in gold leaf, with various jewelry pieces bedecking the body.

Near Heka-shepas’ tomb, other shafts were found that uncovered important wooden statues, some behind a false wall.

The Step Pyramid of Djoser is thought to be the oldest monumental stone building in Egypt, and the Saqqara cemetery nearby has yielded many outstanding treasures before. In 2021, the tomb of Queen Nearit, who was the wife of King Teti, the first king of the sixth dynasty of the Old Kingdom, was found there, as was the royal treasurer of Pharaoh Ramses II.
